

Honors Program Admissions Requirements

Incoming First-Year Students:

During the undergraduate application process, prospective students are identified by virtue of exceptional promise, based on their prior academic achievements, extra-curricular activities, and leadership potential. Those who indicate interest in the Honors Program must complete an interview with a member of the Honors Council. The Honors Council includes the Director of the Honors Program and faculty/staff representing different areas of the university.

Incoming Transfer Students:

Any incoming transfer student who is a member of their current institution's honors program may be invited for participation in the Delaware Valley Honors Program. Those who indicate interest in the Honors Program must complete an interview with a member of the Honors Council. The Honors Council includes the Director of the Honors Program and faculty/staff representing different areas of the university. Students may be asked to submit honors course syllabi from their previous institution for evaluation of honors course credit at Delaware Valley University. Participation in the Honors Program may lengthen the amount of time required to complete all academic requirements.

Current Delaware Valley University Students:

Any current Delaware Valley University student may petition the Director of the Honors Program for consideration of admission to the Honors Program if they do not meet the above criteria. This request will be evaluated by the Director and other members of the Honors Council (faculty/staff representing different areas of the university). It must be submitted at least 90 days before the start of the third semester of classes completed at Delaware Valley University. Please note that participation in the Honors Program may lengthen the amount of time required to complete all academic requirements.

Note: The Delaware Valley Honors Program is an undergraduate program. At this time, graduate students at DelVal cannot be members of the Honors Program.
